Creating Endless Opportunities with Design

Many Eligible SR&ED Activities in Building Science and Engineering

Engineering is a highly innovative industry, and most participants in this industry will have activities eligible for SR&ED tax credits. Many engineering companies believe they don't do any R&D when in fact a large amount of their innovations, designs, and experiments are claimable.

Examples of Eligible SR&ED activities: (Engineering Industry)

- Design of new and unconventional erection methods for tall construction projects and buildings that are in high density or hard to reach geographical areas.
- Productivity improvement by development of innovative handling systems, energy savings systems and building fixtures, and process layouts.
- Developing HVAC and air conditioning, water chillers, boilers, power generation, electrical power distribution and control systems.

If you find your company currently takes part in any of these activities, then why wait to take advantage of the SR&ED tax credit program to receive healthy credit for your innovations?

You are only a few steps away from getting what your company truly deserves for creating, innovating, and developing new products or process.

The Scientific Research and Experimental Development Program:

SR&ED incentives take the form of tax credits, and accelerated or additional tax deductions for expenditures made on research and development. Canadian businesses of all sizes, in all sectors are eligible to receive SR&ED tax credits. The incentives range from 20% of the expenditure, to almost 50% in favorable circumstances.

SR&ED expenditures can include wages, materials, machinery, equipment, overheads, and SR&ED contracts.

Braithwaite Technology Consultants Inc. can assist you in obtaining tax credits for research and development activities.
